

PETITION TO FEDERAL LEADERS: PROVIDE EMERGENCY RELIEF FOR SCHOOL MEAL PROGRAMS

We, the undersigned school nutrition professionals working in America's child nutrition programs and the K-12 industry, urge federal leaders to take immediate action to address the growing affordability crisis facing school meal programs.

Nearly 30 million students across the United States rely on school meals each day. School meal programs are a critical support system for working families, helping ensure children are nourished, healthy, and ready to learn.

We are grateful that our federal leaders are talking about the nutrition and health of our children. We take great pride in serving our communities and supporting American farmers, ranchers, and food producers through our purchases of domestically grown and produced foods.

Today, however, these programs face an unprecedented financial challenge. Rising food, labor, transportation, equipment, and operating costs have outpaced federal reimbursement rates, leaving many programs struggling to cover the actual cost of preparing and serving meals that meet federal nutrition standards. Across the country, despite careful stewardship of federal funds, school nutrition operations are experiencing significant financial pressure because reimbursements no longer reflect the realities of today's costs.

For example:

- Federal reimbursement is only $4.85 — this rate does not come close to covering food, labor, or fuel in 2026, let alone the pricy ingredients schools serve, including milk, fresh produce, whole grains and lean protein.
- Food-away-from-home inflation is running 3.5% and rising — tariffs, supply chain disruption, and input costs hit every delivery we receive. Compared to commercial foodservice, the K-12 segment faces even higher costs, as we prepare and serve specialized foods to meet strict nutrition standards limiting sodium, added sugar and fat that other foodservice segments are not interested in purchasing.
- Diesel hit $5.45/gallon this spring; even as fuel prices may ease slightly this summer, food distributors' surcharges are already locked into fall contracts.
- 98% of school nutrition directors report challenges with the cost of food, and more than half express serious concern about the financial sustainability of their programs.
- Districts are already posting six-figure losses — despite extensive efforts to manage funds efficiently, because Washington's reimbursement no longer covers what it costs to feed children well-balanced meals — all while we wait for updates to nutrition standards that will further escalate costs.

School nutrition professionals are committed to serving healthy meals, incorporating more minimally processed and US grown foods, and meeting evolving nutrition requirements. Yet these goals cannot be achieved without adequate federal support. As schools prepare for a new academic year, many programs are confronting difficult financial decisions that could impact their ability to sustain high-quality meal service for students.

We respectfully call on federal officials to review all existing administrative authorities and legislative pathways to increase support to schools facing this affordability crisis.

America's students are counting on us. We ask you to stand with school nutrition professionals and school districts around the country to invest in the future of our nation's children.
